

"RAW DEAL" ALLEGED BY DISTRICT TROOPS

Sickness Among Horses Attributed to Poor Quality of Forage.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., July 22.—Immediately following unofficial charges that the District National Guard has received a "raw deal" from the Pennsylvania farmers with whom Brigadier General Harries contracted for horses, further protests have come from virtually every mounted officer, and especially the members of the field artillery, that the provender being furnished by the regular army quartermaster in charge has caused sickness among the animals.

An officer of the brigade staff said today that the apical meningitis scare of Wednesday, which resulted in the death of several horses and the shooting of two, could be laid directly to the poor forage said to have been furnished by them.

After veterinary surgeons from the regular army troops in camp here and from Gettysburg had pronounced the disease meningitis, L. H. Marshall, of the University of Pennsylvania, and one of the leading authorities of the State on diseases of horses, announced today, after an examination of the horses, were suffering from "forage disease," due to poor provender.

The announcement caused consternation among those members of the District Guard who have brought their own horses with them.

Scare Is Spreading.

Among the men who brought their own horses is General Harries, who has his valuable Kentucky thoroughbred Potomac here. The scare spread when it became known that one of the members of the famous "Millionaire Essex Cavalry troop," of the New Jersey State militia, reported a $5,000 horse to be suffering with tetanus.

The veterinarian in charge administered antitoxin and the animal may be saved, but it is feared the disease will spread.

The hay to which the sickness of the horses is attributed was shipped here in bales and given to the horses without examination, the hostlers taking it for granted that the regular army officers were aware of the quality of the food supplied for the use of animals.

As a matter of fact, the hay could not be worse. The inside of each and every bale was found to be poisonous. Hay in this condition is known to be poisonous to horses, and three of those brought here by the District guard have died and a number of others were made seriously ill.

Now that the cause of the trouble has been discovered a new supply of hay will be ordered and precautions will be taken to prevent a recurrence of the difficulty.

COMMITTEE NAMED TO MEET RETAILERS

Chamber of Commerce Gets Ready for Conference in Affiliation.

Hoping to work out some plan to link the newly organized Retail Merchants' Association with the Chamber of Commerce, a special committee has been appointed by the directors of the Chamber to confer with a committee of the merchants.

The committee of the Chamber, named yesterday afternoon, consists of D. J. Kaufman, chairman; James F. O'Neil, A. Letwinich, J. L. Weller, D. S. Porter, Harry King, and Chapin Brown. A report from the retailers, but declared that the constitution of the parent body is not broad enough to permit as much freedom of action as the merchants desire.

These two special committees will confer later.

WASHINGTON PLAN TAKEN AS A MODEL

Method of Treating Billboards in Capital to Be Adopted Elsewhere.

Washington's method of handling the so-called billboard nuisance, is being used by the American Civic Association in promoting its billboard campaign throughout the United States.

The Capital's attitude toward the billboard is looked upon by officers of this association as the best in the country, and the success being met with here was the subject of the leading article in the new bulletin issued by this association.

In refusing to permit the erection of any new boards within the city and the gradual weeding out of the old ones, according to the expiration of contracts affecting them, Washington is shown to be rapidly removing this "nuisance" from its precincts.

Secretary Watrous said today that he has information to the effect that, upon his association's advice Washington's method will be adopted by Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Hartford, and Providence.

PITOMETERS STOP WASTE OF WATER

Millions of Gallons Saved Through Inspections and Tests.

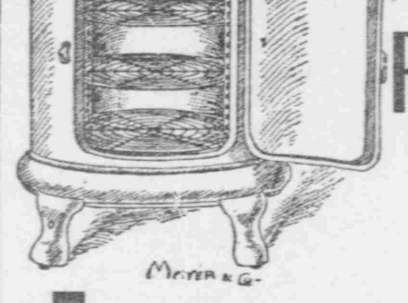

Within the last year the pitometer division of the Water Department has found and corrected in the District of Columbia a waste of 6,346,150 gallons a day.

As the result of an inspection of 21,642 houses, leaky fixtures were found in 3,305 or 15 per cent of the total. These were reported to George W. Wallace, Water Registrar, with the result that after formal notice to the tenant to make repairs, the water was shut off from 1,232 premises.

"The old adage 'We never miss the water till the well runs dry,' is true of certain residents of the District of Columbia," said Mr. Wallace today. "Notices to make repairs to leaky water fixtures are served on the tenants. While the owners and agents of property are usually willing to comply it frequently happens that they are not informed of the notice by the tenant. The result is that the latter awakens some morning to find the water shut off. Then comes a protest to the Water Department, concerning the inconvenience to which he is subjected."

The work of installing water meters in residences is progressing steadily. The Commissioners today awarded a contract for 3,000 meters, for which the District will pay $6 each. These meters will be installed without cost to the property owners in the district north of Florida avenue, and in the northeast and southwest sections of the city.
